Website analytics

Web analytics is the collection and analysis of the data generated when people visit and use a website. This helps the website owner know such things as the number of visitors to various parts of the website, the time they spend on the website and if they return to the website. Various tools are used to produce web analytics, such as Google Analytics, which uses a set of cookies to collect data.

This website uses the following web analytics:

Identify the web analytics tools in use throughout your website. Your IT provider/web developer will be able to answer this.

What are cookies?

A cookie is a small file of text that may be saved on the memory or storage of your electronic device (computer, phone, or tablet, etc.) when you visit a website. Cookies are used to improve the way the website works and can be used to remember the information you've provided so that you don't have to re-enter it on subsequent pages.

Two types of cookies are typically used:

Session cookies – these are temporary and are removed when you close your browser or leave a website. These are used to remember visitors as they move from page to page on a website and are typically used to store your basket when using online shopping.

Persistent cookies – these remain on your device for much longer, even after you close the browser or restart the device. They remain until you remove them or they expire, which can be up to 12 months. They are typically used to store information such as your name, language preferences, or login information.

We use third-party widgets (standalone applications that are inserted into the website, i.e. a newsfeed or banner) on the site, such as Twitter and Facebook. These widgets may set their own cookies, and they also may use cookies that we have no control over.

What do we use cookies for?

We use cookies so that:

- We can distinguish you from other users of our website and provide a good experience.
- We can remember the information you've provided us with while on our website, so you don't have to keep re-entering the information whenever you visit a new page.
- We can look at how you use our website so that we can improve it for other users.

We do not use cookies to:

- Monitor your usage of other websites (privacy intrusive cookies).
- Collect any personal information about you (without your express permission).
- Collect any sensitive information.
- Pass data to any advertising networks.
- Pass personal data to third parties.

Consent for cookies

When you first visit our website using a new browser, we will provide you with a cookies permission banner, seeking your consent for the use of certain cookies.

Not all cookies require consent. Those which are needed for the operation of the website, known as 'strictly necessary' cookies, do not require consent. Without these cookies, the website cannot work as designed.

We also use other cookies which do not require consent, such as those that enable us to collect information for statistical purposes about how you have used our website, or cookies that allow you to choose the website's appearance and functions.

Other types of cookies do require consent. These include:

- Advertising or marketing cookies, which are used to target advertising on a website.

You can change your cookie preferences at any time through our cookie banner, but please be aware that opting out of cookies may affect your user experience on our website.

What is our lawful basis for processing your information?

Under the UK GDPR, it is essential to have a lawful basis when processing personal information. We normally rely on the following lawful bases:

- Article 6(1)(a) – consent.
- Article 6(1)(f) – legitimate interest.

We only rely on legitimate interests when we are using your data in ways you would reasonably expect.
